DESCRIPTION (Continued)	17 OTHER NOTABLE FEATURES OF BUILDING OR SITE (interior and/or exterior)
	This house is a simple Victorian dwelling with a 2-bay facade and a full-height ell at the right rear. There is an entry on the right which retains its original door with a large light above three panels. A one-story porch extends around to the right to meet the ell. It has a square rail and balusters, small jigsawn post brackets with small drops at the top and bottom, turned posts, and similarly turned engaged posts where it meets the exterior walls of the house. Windows are fitted with 2-over-2 sash; modern siding obscures surround and frame details. There is a semi-circular attic window on the front gable. The cornice has simple jigsawn corner brackets with incised lines and shows no return. To the right is a side entry in the ell.
SIGNIFICANCE	18 ARCHITECT		BUILDER
	19 HISTORICAL OR ARCHITECTURAL IMPORTANCE
Although some of its detailing has been obscured or removed by the installation of later siding, this house is significant for retaining much of its Victorian appearance. The turned posts of the porch and the corner brackets on the main roof cornice are typical of the type of elaborate decorative woodwork made possible in the middle and late 19th century by improvements in woodworking technology. The plan of the house, a relatively narrow front gable with a full-height ell, is also a typical Victorian feature. Historically, the house is significant as one of a number built by the East Berlin Building Company, which included among its principals several major figures in the Berlin Iron Bridge Company. 19. (continued):

During the boom years of the 1880s and 1890s, the Building Company, along with a number of private developers, built a large number of homes in East Berlin to house Berlin Iron Bridge's rapidly expanding workforce. This house was rented out by the Building Company, which retained ownership until 1913.
